FROM ROGERS' RECOLLECTIONS. Grattan's talk, as preserved by Rogers, is often capital in itself, apart from its value as an illustration. Take the following scraps: "Were you twenty years old, and Captain Cook setting sail, would you go round the world with him? No! I have no wish to see such countries as he saw. I wish to see Rome and Athens, and some parts of Asia; but lit-tle besides.—My Uncle Dean Marley was famous for the best little dinners, and the best company in Dublin-but when made a Bishop be enlarged his table, and he lost his fame-he had no more good company-and there was an end to his enjoyment. He had at first about four hundred pounds, and his little dinners were delightful; but he had an estate left him, and afterwards came to a bishoprick—he had lords and ladies to his table-people of fashion-foolish men and foolish women-and there was an end of him and of us .--- He [Marley] had much of the humor of Dean Swift. Upon one occasion when the foot-man was out of the way, he ordered the coachman to fetch some water from the well. The coachman objected, saying that 'it was his business to drive, and not to run on errands.'- Then bring the coach and four said he, 'and put the pitcher into it, and drive to the well: '-a service which was performed many times to the great entertainment of the village. - Which would you rather pass a day with, Alexander, Casar, or Bonaparte? Cæsar, as I am much interested about his time. I would ask him, (and here he enumerated many questions about his campaigns) what were the real characters of many of his contemporaries -- and I would ask him, but I would not press the question, (he might answer it or not as he pleased) what part he took in the Catiline conspiracy.—In travelling, I should like the lower orders of the people better than the middle ones, for my companions-I would rather be in a heavy coach than in one that carried four .--- Of all men, if I could call upon one, it should be Scipio Africanus. Hannibal was perhaps a greater captain, but not so great and good a man. Epaminondas did not do so much .--Themistocles was a rogue.—In modern times Washington, I believe, was the greatest man, and next to him, William the Third. -Burke was so fond of arbitrary power, he could not sleep upon his pillow, unless he thought the King had a right to take it from under him .- Stella used often to visit my aunt, and sleep with her in the same bed, and weep all night. She was not very handsome. Miss V-was handsome. Milton like best of them all. He is much more poetical than Shakspeare; and if anybody would be a public speaker, let him study his prose and his poetry-his prose is often an admirable model for the majestic style of speaking .-To be a good shot is useful! It makes a brave man braver, a timid man half-brave; and all men are born cowards. But it makes a man worse than it found him-a bully." From Porson, we take these brief examples of table talk: "Had I a carriage, and did I see a welldressed person on the road, I would always invite him in, and learn of him what I could. iron mask was Anne's eldest son-- I have no is represented to be a valuable fertilizer. We re doubt of it. - Two parties must consent to the publication of a book, the public as well as the author .- Mr Pitt conceives his sentences before he utters them. Mr. Fox throws himself into the middle of his, and leaves it to God Almighty to get him out again .-When Prometheus made man, he had used up all the water in making other animals; so he mingled his clay with tears .--- Of Mackintosh: He means to get interest for his principal. - Of Sheridan: He is a promising tory of the Grand Hum in a 100 volumes folio. -I love an octavo; the pages are soon readthe milestones occur frequently .-- If I had 3,000 per ann. I would have a person constantly dressed night and day, with fire and can-dle to attend upon me. (He is an uncertain sleeper.)—I had lived long before I discov-ered that wit was truth—Wit is in general the finest sense in the world-We all speak in metaphors. Those which appear not to do it, only use those which are worn out, and are overlooked as metaphors. The original fellow is therefo e regarded as only witty; and the dull are consulted as the

It would be unfair to draw further on this little volume. We have indicated and proved its worth. Its fault, if it be a fault, is that it is all essence-requiring, therefore, some slight knowledge and imagination in the reader for its full relish. No one will hereafter write of the celebrated men alluded to in these pages, without having a perfect mastery of Roger's 'Recollections.'

PHYSICAL BENEFIT OF THE SABBATH. The Sabbath is God's special present to the working men, and one of his chief objects is to prolong his life, and preserve efficient his working tone. In the vital system it acts like a compensation-pond; it replenishes the spirits, the clasticity, and vigor which the last six days have drained away, and supplies the force which is to fill the six days succeeding; and, in the economy of existence, it answers the same purpose as, in the economy in income, is answered by a savings bank. The frugal man who puts away a pound to-day and another pound next month, and who, in a quiet way, is putting by his stated pound from time to time, when he pound back again, but a good many pounds grows old and frail gets not only the same esides. And the conscientions man, who husbands one day of his existence every week-who, instead of allowing the Sabbath to be trampled and torn in the hurry and scramble of life, treasures it devoutly up, the Lord of the Sabbath keeps it for him, and, in the length of days, the hale old age gives it back with usury. The savings bank of human existence is the weekly Sabbath .- North
